The traces of the fishermen go from Port Maria (1st sardine port in France from 1930 to 1947) to Manémeur, an old fishing village. The wild coastline has impressive cliffs.

Step by step:

Departure: Take the greenway which passes the car park on the left. While remaining careful, cross the road in the bend, at the indicated place, for more safety.
1- Continue on the path of the Côte Sauvage whose cliffs, sometimes more than 20 m high, face the assaults of the west winds and the sea. Continue up to the point of Château Turpault, an Anglo-medieval manor house built by a Cholet spinner in 1910, which marks the entrance to Quiberon (private property). On the way, discover the Covered Alley of the Pointe de la Guérite, a buried tomb dating from the Neolithic period, whose cover slabs are outcropping on the surface. It is located near a menhir.
2- Enter Quiberon by walking along the quays to the fishing port. Walk past the Port Maria ferry terminal (1870) which was the first sardine port in France at the beginning of the 20th century. The fish auction is

see the work of art inspired by a poem by Pablo Néruda featuring a fish. Quai de l'Océan, see a concrete parapet, a vestige of the Atlantic Wall. Quiberon was part of the "Lorient pocket", liberated from the German occupation at the end of the Second World War.

Turn to the left, then immediately to the right in the street "rue du Couchant" and finally to the left.
4- At the Place du Manémeur, take the track between two houses, and continue on 300 m.
